If Microsoft has a monopoly on the Intel PC OS market, and they have abused that monopoly power, then the remedy as submitted is insufficient to curb their behavior. I find it offensive that the government, having found that a monopoly exists and that Microsoft has abused their monopoly position, is satisfied with a slap on the wrist for this firm. They have shown an inability to curb their behavior in the past and no intention of curbing their behavior in the future. This settlement should be rejected.

Thank you,
